Re: Patent Rights of Future Motion, Inc.; Kolisch Ref. – KJD.601

Dear Whom It May Concern:

My firm represents Future Motion, Inc. of Santa Cruz, California (“Future Motion”) in intellectual property matters. Future Motion is the creator of the popular ONEWHEEL® self-balancing electric vehicle.

Future Motion owns various patent rights that protect its ONEWHEEL® product, including U.S. Patent No. 9,101,817 (“the ‘817 patent”) and U.S. Design Patent No. D746,928 (to issue January 5, 2016) (“the ‘928 patent”). Future Motion has spent significant time, effort and money developing and marketing ONEWHEEL®. To protect its rights, Future Motion is willing to enforce its patents in federal court.

It has come to Future Motion’s attention that Changzhou First International Trade Co., Ltd. (“Changzhou”) is marketing a “Surfing Electric Scooter” product that appears to copy the ONEWHEEL® design and to infringe at least the ‘928 patent, and possibly also claims 1-16 of the ‘817 patent. Attached are copies of the issue notification and the allowed drawings of the ‘928 patent, and a copy of the issued ‘817 patent.

We understand that Changzhou intends to display and market this product at the CES exhibition in Las Vegas from January 6-9, 2016, Booth No. S2-25436. Future Motion believes it will be irreparably harmed if Changzhou introduces its infringing product at the CES show, and therefore intends to file a complaint for patent infringement in the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, along with an emergency motion for a temporary restraining order to prevent Changzhou from showing the “Surfing Electric Scooter” at the CES show.

Future Motion would prefer to resolve this matter without a lawsuit, and is willing to withhold filing its lawsuit if Changzhou will agree, without formal litigation, not to show the “Surfing Electric Scooter” at the CES show in Las Vegas, and more generally to stop making, using, offering for sale, selling and importing the “Surfing Electric Scooter.”

Please respond to me by December 31, 2015. If we do not have your agreement to withdraw the “Surfing Electric Scooter” from the CES show by then, we plan to file our complaint and emergency motion for a temporary restraining order in federal court before the show starts on January 6, 2016. At that point we will seek all remedies available under U.S. patent law, including a permanent injunction, monetary damages, and attorney’s fees.

Very truly yours,
